George Soros' Coup

One of the world's richest men is attempting to influence the U.S. presidential election this year.

His net worth is at least $7 billion.

He reportedly controls an additional $11 billion in assets through his investment funds.

His foundations give away up to $400 million a year.

He wants to buy the 2004 presidential election for the Democrats.

He talks openly of driving President Bush from office and of forcing "regime change" in the United States.

He says he might even spend his whole fortune to make this happen.

He has likened himself to the Messiah.

His name is George Soros, and he means business.

It must have been a surreal moment last year when Soros first unveiled his anti-Bush obsession to the Washington Post.

"America under Bush is a danger to the world," said the multibillionaire. Ousting this sitting U.S. president, Soros admitted, "is the central focus of my life ... a matter of life and death."

With those words Soros declared war on George W. Bush. And for Soros, war is total. "I'm willing to put my money where my mouth is," he said.

How much money, the Post asked? Would Soros spend his whole fortune to oust Bush? "If someone
